Everybody Who Sees the Vacation Kiddies Wants to Do Something for Them; Then Things Happen to Make the Youngsters Happy

They Did Things

Everybody—well, almost everybody—who sees "Fresh Airs" in action wants to do something for them.

"Poor little denrs!" say the ladies, and in the next breath, "Oh, I'd like to do something for them!" And they do—something.

"Poor kids." say the men to themselves, and then aloud, "Here, take this and buy something for 'em"

A few days ago seventy-five "Fresh Airs" were traveling home from vacations in Putnam, Conn. Through some slip their special car was not on the train at Putnam and the children had to crowd in with the regular passen. tions in Putnam, Conn. Through some slip their special car was not on the train at Putnam and the children had to crowd in with the regular passengers. of bricks of ice cream. It was one of these hottest days, too!

The lady who sent the telegram put the keystone in the arches of seventy-five friendships that day.

But not all the "somethings" done are so meltingly ephemeral as the freezer of ice cream. Look below in the list of contributions received yesterday and you'll find one that cpells comfort for "Fresh Airs" for years fo come. There's no need to tell you how bad the mosquitoes have been this summer.

of Amityville said to the Fund:

"You'll need to have screens for that building." And then, in the next breath, "Maybe we could collect money enough among the Amityville friends of 'Fresh Airs' to pay for them for you—if you'd like to have us."

The Fund replied that it would—and they did.

But that's not all they did for the girls of Holiday House. Every time 200 girls arrived at the Amityville station on their way to their vacs.

200 giris arrived at the Amityville's station on their way to their vacations, there were Amityville's finest motors waiting to speed them down to the tip of Newpoint, where stands the Fund's finest vacation home. And every time 200 girls had their bags packed for the homeward trip, there were those same motors ready to whisk them away to the station.

It was the very thing the Fund had been honing would happen for several years. The folks were glad to know this and organized at once. Then they set to work to see how many things that have been of the friendly "regulars" dropped off the train and ran for the telegraph office, just manging to get aboard again as the train pulled out. Result—when the special car was entered at Williamantic it was found to be already occupied. Nestling cozily in one corner of it stood a freezer full of bricks of ice cream. These are but samples of the thousand and one things that have been done by people who became friends of "Fresh Airs" through seeing them in action. The list of the others would fill this morning's Tribune. The world is full of kind folks if you just show them something that needs the exercise o'. the kindness to set it right.

If you haven't been kind yet this summer to the "Fresh Airs" think of this: The Fund has a mountain of bills—incurred from Fresh Air vacations this summer—still to pay. A little kindness on your part would help to take the top off the mountain.

Interests Not Bound by Pulpit

Ten years' work in the Methodist ministry followed, during several years of which he was also State Superintendent of Public Institutions in Wisconsin, and in 1873-1875 president of Illinois Wesleyan University. Meantime in 1873 the Reformed Episcopal Church had been organized by seceders from the Protestant Episcopal Church and others of other denominations, and, the principles of that body strongly appealing to him, Dr. Fallows in 1875 joined its ministry and became rector of St. Paul's Church, Chicago, and also editor of the church organ, "The Appeal."

In 1876 he was elected a bishop, with jurisdiction in the West and Northwest, and for eight terms in later years was chosen Presiding Bishop of the Church. For twenty-one years he was president of the board of managers of the Illinois State Reformatory. He was chafrman of the General Educational Commission of the World's Congress Auxiliary in 1893; chancellor of the University Association; chaplain in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic in 1907-1908; national patriotic instructor of the G.
